Mr. Tolson;

RE: LADISLAS FARAGO

George Sokolsky advised me that Ladislas Farago had written a book which he had sold to Funk and Wagnall having to do with an over-all study of espionage. For some unknown reason CIA sent a representative to New York with a view of blocking the publication of this book on the basis that it would serve no useful purpose. George did not know whether this was meeting much resistance with the publishers, but stated that it had become the subject of considerable comment.

A Remarkable Coincidence In the Cold War

By JAMES RESTON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—The capital saw something new this week—the "surfacing" of a genuine straight-up-and-down Soviet spy, Yuri Alexandrovich Rastvorov or Dmitrovsk.

If you've never been to a "surfacing," it's a little like a launching, only without the champagne. Also it's more mysterious. Invitations were issued suddenly over the telephone about 4 o'clock Friday afternoon.

There would be a "briefing," the man said, at 6:15, at the State Department. Very important. Internationally significant. Couldn't say more. Then he hung up.

Later an Assistant Secretary of State himself called. Don't miss this one, he warned. Big show. At 6 o'clock there were about 200 reporters in the State Department's blue auditorium.

Enter Comrade Rastvorov

Yuri Alexandrovich Rastvorov or Dmitrovsk "surfaced" at precisely 6:43. He came walking in the midst of a highly nervous audience whose members wanted to know if there was any connection between the sudden appearance of Mr. Rastvorov at this time and the "surfacing" earlier in the week of Dr. Otto John, the West German spy chief who skipped to the Communists in East Berlin.

Henry Sydam, the State Department's press officer, was eloquent. Certainly not, he said, is a connection whatsoever. Thus the reporters found themselves in attendance upon the most remarkable coincidence of the cold war.

What Comrade Yuri Alexandrovich Rastvorov then went through was really something. At a regular press conference he more than four Communist Party members associated in the audience at 6:15, but the rule at a "surfacing" seems to be that only one person is permitted to speak.

He spoke in a low, steady voice, and he was accompanied by a woman, a woman who was identified as a member of the Communist Party. He spoke in a low, steady voice, and he was accompanied by a woman, a woman who was identified as a member of the Communist Party.

Was the Soviet Union really so naive? Hadn't been in Moscow for four years. Did he think the United States and the Soviet Union could live in the same world without war? He hoped so. Did he get any information from Americans in Tokyo? No. Did the Soviet Embassy run the Communist party in Japan? No, the Communist party in Moscow ran the Communist party in Japan. What did he know about the activities of the Soviet secret agents in the United States? He didn't know. Tokyo was a long way from the United States.

Improvement Needed

Mr. Rastvorov isn't the first defector from the Soviet spy system and he won't be the last, but if Washington and Moscow are to go on throwing defectors at each other, the art of "surfacing" in Washington has clearly got to be improved.

What has happened here in the last couple of weeks is that the intelligence agency of the Government (the C. I. A.) has moved out of the realm of secret service work and into the realm of public propaganda.

It was upset by the Otto John case. He had been talking to some of our highest officials early this summer and he went back to Germany and turned traitor.

The reaction in official Washington was to deny the inspired stories were put out by the capital designed to prove that he had been a spy. Into the East Zone of Berlin, and when American reporters saw him in Berlin and demolished this theory, Rastvorov, who said he had been in this country since last January, was suddenly produced.

This illustrates a comparatively new problem of the cold war. In this fierce struggle with the Communists, the United States must have an effective secret service which does all sorts of things that cannot, in the national interest, be printed. Our spies are captured and our planes shot down from time to time in circumstances that cannot be put into the press without great benefit to the Communist cause.

A New Problem

There is a growing tendency here, not only to expect the press to go beyond its normal functions, but to expect it to do things that are not only unbecoming but also dangerous to the national security. It is not only unbecoming but also dangerous to the national security.

There is a growing tendency here, not only to expect the press to go beyond its normal functions, but to expect it to do things that are not only unbecoming but also dangerous to the national security. It is not only unbecoming but also dangerous to the national security.

cy jeopardizes the secrets which it must enjoy if it is to operate effectively.

Ever since it was established it has been fighting against Congressional supervision. It has not only rejected Senator McCarthy's efforts to investigate its procedures but has been less than enthusiastic about Senator Mike Mansfield's suggestions that a joint Congressional committee be established like the joint committee on atomic energy to oversee its activities. A good case can be made that the committee, but Congress is not likely to grant it to an agency that exists on a secrecy one day and is making propaganda the next.

The Doolittle Committee's examination of CIA is one of a number of attempts to improve CIA. Previous attempts have only resulted in patch work, piecemeal recommendations for improvement without touching on fundamentals. In other words - salves and pills have been used instead of radical surgery.

Fundamentally, the other functions of CIA have overshadowed, slanted, confused, and hindered the work of information gathering. Psychological warfare, guerrilla activities, fomenting of revolutions and so forth have engaged the full energies of the top officials. Obviously, information gathering must be the prelude to all other action and therefore is the most important function. It is hard to see how CIA can effectively and efficiently function in collecting information with its present organization even though it might be possible to vastly improve it.

What is needed is a small, compact, well-trained, tightly disciplined, information-gathering agency entirely separate, apart and out of the control of CIA. Five hundred operatives could cover the world. Even with appropriate supervisory and clerical help, it would be a small budget organization. Its sole concern should be collection of information.

The present CIA should be confined to the specific duties given to it by Statute, that is, coordination, correlation and evaluation of intelligence received from other sources, and such other functions of "common concern" as the President desires to entrust to it outside of information-gathering.

CIA now has the duty of collecting information abroad by virtue of Presidential Directive issued under the provisions of the Statute relating to assigning it functions of "common concern." This function could be taken away from it in the same way and entrusted to an existing agency or a newly created agency.

Doolittle is reputed to be a straightforward, hard driving individual who appears to be close to the President. He might be able to effectuate the needed radical change in spite of the opposition which would be received from the empire building clique in CIA.

MR. BELMONT

It is suggested that in view of the urgency of this matter to the welfare of the United States, if the opportunity occurs during our dealings with the Doolittle Committee we diplomatically drop a suggestion along the above lines.

ADDENDUM - AHB:LL - August 18, 1954

This suggestion has considerable merit. However, a suggestion by us during the conference with General Doolittle could be written up as a recommendation from the Bureau that the structure of CIA be changed along these lines, which appears to be beyond the scope of the Doolittle interview. Therefore, I recommend we do not do it, although I will be glad to drop it into the conversation if desired.

A. H. Belmont

I concur. I have a completely defeatist attitude as to any effective corrective measures which might improve CIA under the present atmosphere of intrigue which encompasses CIA & the State Dept.

I concur

RE: CIA TECHNICIANS

You will recall that the Central Intelligence Agency, with our permission, established a teletype machine in our Communications Section in order to establish direct communications between the FBI and CIA headquarters. The machine not only belongs to CIA but its maintenance and upkeep is handled by CIA technicians. In order for CIA men to work on this machine, it is necessary for them to go into our C^Ode Room down on the fourth floor. 2-1

CIA technicians carry a card, with their picture stamped on the card, and a serial number beneath the picture. A second serial number is on the back of the card. There are no names of any individuals or organizations included on the card. This is supposed to identify the technician as a CIA representative. Prior to the CIA man coming to the FBI to work on the teletype machine, CIA calls over and indicates that one of their men will be over soon to work on the teletype machine. A name is given at that time.

When one of our people go over to CIA, our credentials are not respected. We are issued a special pass and we are then personally escorted to the section or office where our business demands our appearance. We later have to turn in this pass and are escorted out of the building. Aside from the fact that CIA fails to respect our credentials, it is felt we have no security at all under the procedure where CIA sends over their technicians to go into our code room and work on the CIA teletype machine. 7-11

On August 12, 1954, one of their men called over here from CIA and later came over to work on the teletype machine. He had with him at the time only the above-mentioned card. Mr. Wherry and I talked to this man and asked him to produce other proof of his identity which he did in the form of a driver's license and other identifying cards.

This matter has been discussed with the Bureau's liaison man to CIA, Mr. Papich. Papich has been instructed to advise CIA that some better system of identification must be worked out if their technicians expect to continue to gain admittance to our code room. He is currently working out plans with CIA where adequate credentials will be given to their men and a more secure program will be effected. N

Reference is made to memorandum dated August 17, 1954, from Mr. DeLoach to Mr. Nichols wherein information was set forth concerning CIA technicians who periodically come to the Bureau for the purpose of inspecting a teletype machine which is used for communication between the Bureau and the CIA. As you know, the machine is CIA property and was installed by that agency. The machine is located in the Bureau's Code Room.

The Bureau has encountered a problem because the CIA technicians who come to the Bureau to inspect the machine have not adequately identified themselves. This is something the Bureau cannot condone, particularly since the machine is located in a most sensitive area.

Liaison Agent Papich has discussed this matter with [redacted] CIA. [redacted] was informed that the Bureau will not permit these technicians to enter the Bureau premises in the future unless adequate identifying data is made available. [redacted] stated that the Bureau certainly had obviously strong grounds for a protest and he would take corrective action. On August 24, 1954, [redacted] advised Agent Papich that he would make available to the Bureau the names of individuals who might have occasion to inspect the teletype machine. Together with the names there will be submitted the numbers of the CIA passes carried by the employees. On the CIA pass is a photograph of the employee. It is believed that the foregoing should be satisfactory since the Communications Section can check the identifying list furnished to the Bureau with the pass presented by the technician.

On September 10, 1954, Allen Dulles, Director of CIA, advised Agent Papich that Major General James G. Christiansen has been selected by General Mark Clarke to head the working committee which will conduct a survey of CIA's operations. You will recall that information received by the Bureau so far has indicated that Clarke's survey will be limited to an examination of CIA's organizational and administrative structure. Dulles has indicated to the Liaison Agent that [REDACTED] b3

A review of the Bureau's files disclosed that General Christiansen was born September 23, 1897, at Portland, Oregon. He graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1918 [REDACTED]

The Bureau files carry a clipping from the "Honolulu Star-Bulletin" dated October 30, 1946, which reflects that Major General James G. Christiansen was replaced as the head of the Manila Army forces of the USA by Major General George F. Moore. The article reads that no reason was given for the change but it is stated that General Christiansen had been the target of editorial attacks by Manila newspapers because of alleged poor morale of American soldiers in the Philippines. Section 69-G-8 of the Manual of Instructions relating to SGE investigations requires that during a Bureau SGE investigation it is necessary that every person who previously furnished derogatory information to any other Government agency be re-contacted. If upon recontact the person contradicts the information he reportedly furnished the other Government agency, the interviewing Agent must call his attention to the previous information and obtain his comments for any discrepancies involved. The Manual specifically states that when interviewing such individuals the identity of the other Government agency to which he previously furnished information should not be made known to him.
